6. REPORTING AND DISTRIBUTING LESSONS LEARNED

a. Reports Supporting Lessons Learned.

(1) After-Action Reports. AARs provide OIL and include detailed information on operations and training events. Each AAR addresses specific lessons learned and recommendations.

(a) An AAR supporting an operation may include—

1. An executive summary, historical data, and a narrative describing the actions of adjacent and senior headquarters.

2. Relevant statistical data, chronologies, and a detailed analysis of the principal battlefield operating systems.

(b) An AAR supporting a major training event may include—

1. A narrative on significant conferences and milestones leading to the exercise.

2. The exercise design.

3. Other actions supporting the training audience.

(2) Observation Reports. Observation reports state a problem, define a task, describe conditions, and recommend actions needed to prevent or eliminate a problem. The standard format for a USAREUR observation report is topic, discussion, and recommendation. Each report must address only one topic. Observation reports may be used to—
(a) Address broad or specific issues or discrepancies with regard to plans, policy, procedures, or systems.

(b) Address shortcomings in the design of an exercise.

(c) Document comments made during an operation or exercise “hot wash” (informal discussion among key participants immediately after an operation or exercise).

b. The Joint After-Action Reporting System. The JAARS is used for collecting and distributing observations, lessons learned, and issues generated from joint operations and exercises. A JAAR provides information on the operation and training environment of the U.S. Armed Forces. The JAAR includes—

(1) All significant lessons learned before, during, and after the exercise or operation.

(2) Observations from the exercise or operation and significant issues (for example, problems) that arose.

(3) The official description of the exercise or operation.

7. USAREUR LESSONS LEARNED OFFICE

a. The ULLO archives store analyzed OIL collected from exercises, operations, and other events in which USAREUR units participated. These OIL are accessible to commanders and staff officers to support command training and readiness programs and the JAARS. The ULLO at http://lessonslearned.eur.army.mil or http://lessonslearned.hquisareur.army.smil.mil provides access to these observations.

b. The RFR service complements the lessons learned process. The ULLO, in coordination with the CALL, provides the RFR service to help commanders and their staffs gather the information they need to prepare plans and operations or conduct studies. Appendix A lists publications used in the lessons learned program. Appendix B provides guidance on the USAREUR Lessons Learned Program and RFRs.

c. The first priority for RFR service is USAREUR units engaged in operations and training events, followed by DOD agencies, other Government agencies, NATO units, and Allied units.

d. The ULLO will assign an analyst to coordinate the research and provide responses in a format and at a time agreed on by the analyst and the requester.

8. REMEDIAL ACTION

a. Commanders of USAREUR major subordinate and specialized commands and HQ USAREUR/7A staff principals are responsible for taking remedial action to improve operations and training. On request, the ULLO will help commanders and staff principals with the remedial action process by conducting research and organizing, scheduling, and facilitating follow-up reviews.

b. Recommendations that require action by organizations and agencies outside USAREUR may require coordination. The ULLO will help with coordination on request.

c. The ULLO will review OIL on selected topics, provide periodic updates to the CG, USAREUR/7A, and forward appropriate AARs and OIL reports to the CALL.
