Juliana worked for the U.S. War Department as a translator. At the end of the war, she got a job with the Army’s cryptologic service, headquartered at Arlington Hall Station in Virginia.

At Arlington Hall, Juliana worked with Jacob Gurin, another native speaker of Russian, to develop new sources of intelligence on the Soviet Union for NSA.