Defense Secretary visits Pope

Story and Photos by 2nd Lt. A.V. Stephenson

Defense Secretary Casper W. Weinberger said in a visit to Pope Feb. 26 that the President would never let the situation in El Salvador become another Vietnam.

He made that comment during a news conference following a visit to the Pope Air Force Base-Fort Bragg military complex. It was his first tour of a major military installation since becoming the secretary of defense.

There are no combat troops in El Salvador, said Weinberger when he was questioned about the presence of American troops in that country.

"There are a few training missions there for the Salvadoran government and they are giving instruction in ways of dealing with guerrilla insurgency, which is what the government is faced with," he explained.

"There is a very small group of 30 or so and they are nowhere near any of the zones that could be called combat zones."

Weinberger added that those technicians were in El Salvador at the invitation of the government and have a very limited mission

While President Reagan hopes for a lessening of tension in that Central American country, he is also very concerned about any communist inspired activity or communist delivered weapons in that area, according to the defense secretary.

Communist activity has been detected in El Salvador, according to Weinberger, and the United States has indisputable evidence showing Cuban involvement.

"We're taking steps to beef up the American presence wherever it's in the national interest to do so," he said. "We're not looking into anything in that region (El Salvador) that we're not looking into anywhere else where the national interest of the United States is involved.

"It's a subject that's been of concern to American government ever since the Monroe Doctrine (a statement of U.S. foreign policy expressing opposition to extension of European control or influence in the western hemisphere) and it still remains that."

When asked if the United States has considered military action to stop the reported supply of arms to Salvadoran rebels by the Cuban government, the secretary said, "Nothing is ruled out and nothing is planned at the moment...we're simply considering a full range of activities that may be taken, but we would hope would not have to be taken."

The defense secretary was asked if he agreed with Robert M. White's statement that leftist guerriallas were no longer a threat to the junta in El Salvaodr. White was fired recently by Secretary of State, Alexander M. Haig, Jr., as ambassador to that country. Weinberger responded with, "No. That's why he is the former ambassador."

Upon arriving at Pope, the secretary was briefed by Lt. Gen. Thomas H.

Reagan honors Vietnam vets

WASHINGTON (AFNS) -"Several years ago we brought home a group of American fighting men who had obeyed their country's call and had fought as bravely and as well as any Americans in our history. They came home without a victory -- not because they had been defeated, but they had been denied permission to win," said
President Ronald Reagan.

President Reagan was speaking at a Pentagon ceremony to honor retired Army MSgt. Roy P. Benavidez with the nation's highest award, the Congressional Medal of Honor.

In speaking about victnam veterans, President Reagan said, "They were greeted by no parades, no bands, no waving of the flag they had so nobly served. There's been no thank you for their sacrifice. There has been no effort to honor and thus give pride to the families of more than 57,000 young

"There has been little or no recognition for the gratitude we owe the 30,000 men who suffered wounds in that war.

"Pride, of course, cannot wipe out the burden of grief of their families, but it can make that grief easier to bear. The pain will not be quite as sharp if they know that their fellow citizens share that pain. I just think we let it slip our minds for a while.

Chief says people ready

Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Lew Allen recently made several major policy statements in a speech to the Kentucky Press Association.

"Our armed forces," he said, "came very near the brink of disaster with respect to our ability to retain vitally needed, skilled and experienced personnel...The Congress and the Carter, Administration took action last fall to improve significantly military compensation...We have already begun to detect encouraging signs that these initiatives have slowed our personnel losses. I want to stress, however, that the increase in pay and benefits which prompted this turnaround in retention had more than a simple economic impact. Equally important, this attention to the welfare of our people demonstrated a renewed appreciation of their role by the Nation they are pledged to defend...

"It is important to distinguish between two aspects of combat capability. The first aspect is readiness, or the ability to deploy and employ forces effectively without unacceptable delays. The second aspect is sustainability, or the ability to support forces engaged in combat over a substantial period, allowing them to fight long and hard if required.

"Air Force people will always be ready when you need them. In return, they only ask that the Nation never again take them or what they do for granted."

Commander's Forum, INTRO tour orients newcomers

INTRO trys to touch all

I just went to the Newcomer's bus tour of the area. I thought we would be seeing Pope and what's available here--after all, we're all stationed here. But most of the tour involved Fort Bragg. We went all over Bragg, had a guided tour of their Arts and Crafts Center, watched parachutists at a drop zone, went to the Airborne Museum, stopped at the complex for lunch, went for a briefing at the Rod and Gun Club, stopped at the lake to see the beach, and drove all over Bragg.

At Pope we went on a C-130 and had a few things pointed out as we drove past in the bus.

The tour guide also passed out copies of the Paraglide and spent a good deal of time talking about what a wonder paper it was. No mention was made about the Hercules Herald. In fact, I thought there must not be a base paper since it wasn't passed out.

I think the bus tour of the area is a good idea-but after all we're stationed at Pope-not Fort Bragg. I'd like to have had a tour of our facilities-the gym, hobby shop, chapel, etc. And a copy of our own paper would have been nice.

The intent of the Newcomers' Orientation Program is to orient newly arrived members and families to Pope and surrounding facilities in a friendly and informative manner. The combination of orientation program and bus tour is aimed at making incoming members more aware of the extensive opportunities available to them in our large military community.

The narrated slide presentation during the Pope program and a portion of the bus tour covers the many Pope facilities that most all Air Force members will encounter during their tour here. Our bus tour takes the newcomer beyond the confines of Pope into shopping and recreational areas that are not readily apparent to Air Force members.

We distribute the Paraglide during the bus tour because it is published concurrently with our tour days (Thursdays). The Hercules Herald is integral to all aspects of our INTRO program and current copies are available during the orientation briefings at the Recreation Center.

The success of the INTRO Program depends on modifications we make in response to the critiques, discussions and comments of interested participants. Inputs concerning better ideas for the Pope Community Orientation Program can be made to EXT 2400.

Bring the right shoes

I was playing racquetball the other day and somebody in the gym came up and told me I couldn't wear my sneakers. I had just spent $40 on a pair of sneakers to wear playing racquetball and they're telling me I can't wear them because they have black soles. I would like to find out why they have put this rule into effect. I know a lot of people have black sole sneakers and would like to know.

There are basically three types of recreation shoes. Multipurpose outdoor shoes have 3/8 to ½ inch molded rubber cleats. They are used to play soccer, softball, and flag football and give good traction on grassy and soft dirt surfaces.

Running or jogging shoes have small 1/8 to ¼ inch molded rubber cleats or ripple soles. Generally they have dark soles, blue green or black. They are designed to run in outdoors where feet need a cushion to absorb the shock and there is no worry about marring a floor surface.

Indoor multipurpose shoes have some type of ripple soles made of white non-marking rubber. They are used to play basketball, tennis, volleyball, handball and other indoor games on hardwood surfaces.

Where any shoe other than the one designed for indoor wear is used, on any type of wood floor the sudden stopping and starting will mark the floor. Scouring powder has to be used to remove these marks which also removes the finish on the floor. Once the finish is worn away and the mark gets imbedded in the natural wood it requires sanding to remove it. After a few sandings the floor becomes thin and weak and has to be replaced. All of this is very expensive and can be avoided by wearing the proper shoes.

Absence makes American hearts prouder

By Tina Negulesco

Having been away from my country for so long has helped me decide to write this letter, now that I am "thome" again to stay "home" again to stay.

Why am I proud to be an American?

Well, there are more than a million reasons why. Here are a few of those reasons that I would like to share with

What makes me proud to be an American is the special feeling that I experienced when I walked off the plane. It was a "home at last" sort of feeling. America has run through my veins for 21 years and it is going to stay that way.

I can see now we are all working together side by side, hand in hand, to make our country that much better, that much cleaner and safer for us all and for all the generations to come.

I am proud to be an American because Americans care about America.

Take the American hostages. We all prayed for them. They stayed away from home for so long--too long. They are also a part of each and everyone us. They are our Americans and belong with us in our big home-America.

Yes, we are one nation under God. We are indivisible. We seek the good and believe in the good just as we believe in our God in our own ways.

I am proud to be an American because I am proud of America. It is good to know that somewhere in America, there is always someone waiting to help.

Throughout history

Blacks fight proudly

wonderful people.

From the American Revolution to the Vietnam War, blacks have fought proudly.

Even before the Revolution, blacks were involved in the fight for freedom. One of the first men to give his life for American independence was Crispus Attucks, a runaway slave. He was killed when British soldiers fired on a crowd in Boston, March 5, 1770.

One thousand black enlisted troops

One thousand black enlisted troops fought for their new nation during the Revolutionary War.

Blacks served in integrated army and navy units during the early years of the republic. But from the Civil War to the start of the Korean conflict, they fought under a separate but equal policy.

Turning to the west after the Civil War, they fought Apaches and Sioux, defeating Chief Victorio and capturing Geronimo.

Blacks fought with Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Raiders on San Juan Hill.

More than two million blacks registered for the draft in World War I, many seeing action with the 92nd and 93rd Divisions. After the Armistice, the black units were deactivated. Only a handful of senior black officers remained in uniform.

One was Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Sr. who became the first black Army general. His son, Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., was only the second black to be graduated from West Point.

In 1941 Captain Davis broke the Army Air Corps color barrier, becoming one of the first blacks to take advanced flying training. He went on to command the 93rd Pursuit Squadron, the first black air unit.

The National Security Act of 1947 established the Air Force. One of the men who transferred to the new air arm was then Colonel Davis.

A year later President Harry S. Truman established the Fahy Committee to examine existing regulations regarding military personnel. He wanted to establish equality of treatment and opportunity for all, and the committee proved it could be done.

Colonel Davis sat on the board to examine records of blacks for reassignment to previously all-white units.

A wing commander in the Korean War, Colonel Davis rose to become Lieutenant General Davis, chief of staff of the United Nations Command in Korea and later deputy commander of the U.S. Strike Command, MacDill AFB, Fla.

Blacks were among the first on the scene in Vietnam, as members of advisory teams in the early 1960s.

Today some 79,000 black officers and enlisted people serve in the Air Force, working in every specialty. They make up 14.3 percent of the force. And in 1981, as in the past, they are a proud role model for all of America's youth.

Tackaberry, commander of Fort Bragg and XVIII Airborne Corps.

As part of his tour, he viewed the loading of about 800 paratroopers and a variety of equipment onto 20 Military Airlift Command aircraft. He also inspected the command's C-5 Galaxy, the world's largest transport, which had been loaded with eight helicopters as a demonstration of its load capacity.

as a demonstration of its load capacity. After a brief visit through the topsecret Joint Special Operations Command facilities located at Bragg, Weinberger was flown by a C-130 Hercules to a drop zone on Fort Bragg.

There he saw 800 paratroopers jump from nine C-130 aircraft. This deployment demonstration also included drops of heavy equipment and containerized loads from ll C-130 and C-141 aircraft. The secretary also observed low-altitude parachute-extraction (LAPES) drops by a pair of C-130s.

Defense Secretary Weinberger was escorted during the tour and demonstrations by Gen. Volney Warner, commander of U.S. Readiness Command; Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Sadler, commander of MAC's 21st Air Force; Maj. Gen. James Lindsay, commander of the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg; and Col. Robert B. Patterson, commander of the U.S. Air Force Airlift Center and 317th Tactical Airlift Wing, both located at Pope.

General Tackaberry also accompanied the secretary during his visit.

"There's a lot of talk in Washington, and it's very necessary talk, about improving our strategic air capability and regressing the strategic imbalance...and that's very important.
"The other priority I have had is

"The other priority I have had is readiness of all the units and it's an extraordinarily satisfying thing to see the degree of readiness and the skills that I saw today."

During his news conference he was asked to elaborate more about the Rapid Deployment Force.

"We have forces now that could fill a number of very exacting missions to all parts of the world--many thousands of miles in distance--and that's essentially what we are going to try to do...keep building on that capability," Weinberger explained.

One reporter pointed out that the Joint Chiefs of Staff and other top military leaders have criticized the allvolunteer force and asked if the secretary agreed and could foresee and mandatory national service for the nation's 18-26-year-olds.

"From what I saw this morning," said the 63-year-old defense secretary, "I wouldn't have any criticism for it (all-volunteer force) at all. I have enormous praise for it.

"I think what they have expressed is a concern that the all-volunteer force may not produce enough manpower for all the situations required," he added. "Obviously, if we needed more manpower than we have, we'd have to look to other means, but at the present, we want to stay away from the draft as long as we possibly can."

The secretary was also questioned on the military's loss of mid-level, skilled management people. Weinberger said that last year's 11.7 percent pay raise helped to ease these losses. He added that the proposed 5.3 percent raise this July and an additional 9.1 percent pay hike in October would also greatly enhance the military's ability to slow manpower losses. Both of the straight salary increases are long overdue, he believes, and can see no indication that Congress will disapprove either of Weinberger also mentioned a possibility of special tax cuts for military menbers.

"It is one of the things we're looking at," he explained. "Not so much just for the money, but such an option would illustrate that people in the armed services are in a special, favored and appreciated category.

"Other types of benefits are also being considered, and finally, the thing I hope will help more than anything else, is to impress on the American people again the enormous contributions and sacrifices that are being made by the men and women of the armef forces and the contributions they make so we can live in peace and freedom."

Prior to being selected by President Reagan in December for the nation's highest defense post, Weinberger had served as chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, budget director and secretary of Health, Education and Welfare under former President Richard M. Nixon.

Weinberger's visit to the Pope-Fort Bragg military complex was the first of several planned tours of U.S. military installations by the defense secretary.

Sports: Women's bowling team forms

By TSgt. Mike Callahan USAF Clinic

Qualifications for the 1980-81 'Falconette' Bowling Team will get underway March 18 at Pope Lanes.

Thursday, 18-game qualifier will determine the seven-member squad that will face the Falcon Bowling Team Varsity bowling program coordinator and Falcon coach, Carl Howard, commented, "The response to last year's initial attempt at forming a women's team at Pope was excellent. Those taking part seemed to enjoy the roll-off and were appreciative of the opportunity to compete at the varsity level.

"Although the women will not be formally representing the base in varsity competition," he continued, those who survive the qualification will face the Falcons in team competition. Additionally, the top two active duty qualifiers will be eligible to take part with the Falcons in the Military Airlift Command Championships at Travis AFB, Calif. March 29-30."

Any woman, on active duty with the U.S. Air Force or a dependant of an active duty or retired Air Force member, who is 16 years old or older, may take part providing she is currently in sanctioned league competition at Pope

Both the roll-off and match will be sanctioned through the Womens International Bowling Congress.

Coach Howard concluded, "I strongly encourage Pope's women to come out and participate and enjoy the competition.

TDY mileage rate increases

WASHINGTON (AFNS) -- The temporary-duty mileage rate was increased from 7 to 16 cents per mile for service members effective Jan. 13, according to officials here.

The Nunn-Warner amendment contained in the Military Manpower Management Act signed last September lifted the 7-cents-per-mile ceiling on the TDY mileage allowance. It authorized the Department of Defense to establish new rates based on the average common-carrier cost.

The DOD per-diem travel and transportation allowance committee established the new TDY mileage allowance of 16 cents. The new rate is based on commercial air-fare rates since the airlines are the most commonly used means of transportation for TDY
