General Allen discusses CX, retention

By A1C Andrew Knof

The enhancement of our ground and air forces must be accompanied by a capability to move those forces to overseas theaters, said Gen. James R. Allen, Military Airlift Command commander in chief, at a press conference here during his first visit to Pope since assuming command of MAC June 26.

Department of Defense airlift.

At a Sept. 10 press conference with area reporters, General Allen reemphasized the need for the Air Force's proposed new cargo aircraft, the CX, to satisfy the nation's airlift requirements.

"We can transport everything if

Museum trip slated for Sept. 26

Active Air Force people assigned to Pope and Fort Bragg are eligible to take part in the wing's monthly Air Force Museum flight. Those taking part in the trip will leave Pope Sept. 26 at about 8 a.m. and return to the base about 5 p.m. The museum is located at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, and the flight will be on a C-130 Hercules. Approval for individual members will be made through the Public Affairs Division and each member's supervisor. Anyone interested in the flight should contact Public Affairs, Ext. 4183 for more information or reservations.

you're willing to wait until we can get it done," he said. "There are many shortfalls in our ability to deliver forces to an overseas theater on time."

At present, the general explained, the C-5 Galaxy is the only aircraft capable of delivering outsized equipment like tanks and heavy artillery, and only a limited number of these aircraft are available for that purpose.

"No one would want to go to war without their artillery," said General Allen. "It is important for the national interest that we do enhance our capability to deliver people and things, and particularly, things which are outsized, to an overseas theater."

McDonnell Douglas Corp., Long Beach, Calif., was recently selected as the Air Force's prime contractor to develop the CX after an intensive six-month source selection. The aircraft will be wide-bodied, air-refuelable and capable of landing on a short, unimproved landing strip.

General Allen, calling the CX design a very splendid aircraft, would not prejudge the project's chances of surviving the administration and congress's budget review.

"The logic behind the need for additional airlift capability, including outsize configuration, is very strong," he said. "I hope we can be successful in conveying that logic to Congress."

"There is no question in my mind that if you're going to realize the full potential, in terms of deterrence and war-fighting capability of Army and Air Force forces based in the continental United States, you've got to have a way to move them and move them quickly and responsively to points of crisis and confrontation," he added.

"My total concern is for the national interest and that includes a concern for the impact upon taxpayers and the national budget," he said. "...it just so happens that there are no commercial airplanes that can carry outsized equipment."

Although he would not be directly responsible for supervising the quality controls placed on the CX project, General Allen said that he would be a very interested spectator and that in his view lessons learned from the development of the other aircraft would insure rigorous quality standards.

The general added that it was premature to talk about an increase of people at Pope in connection with the CX.

When questioned about the Air Force's retention outlook, General Allen cited a direct correlation between the retention rate in the Air Force and the unemployment rate in the civilian economy. He also noted recent slowdowns in the airline industry have reduced the drain upon the Air Force's pilots.

General Allen identified an increased awareness, within the American population, congress and administration, that "in order to retain people, we must provide them with a decent wage and decent living and working conditions."

"It doesn't make good economic sense to pinch pennies on salaries we pay our people and then lose them and have to start training all over again."

General Allen said that he was on a campaign to visit all the bases and units in the Military Airlift Command.

"Without exception, I have been terribly impressed with the quality of the officers, senior noncommissioned officers and junior airmen that I have met," he said. "They are first class men and women out there doing a heck of a fine job for their country."

In addition to his press conference, the general toured various base facilities, while at Pope, including the Combat Control School, maintenance complex and flying squadrons.

General and Mrs. Allen departed Pope at 8 a.m. Sept. 11 en route to Charleston AFB, S.C.

No increase in MWR prices

The chief of Morale, Recreation and Welfare, Henry Robinson, at Pope has announced that except for minor increases in the cost of child care services there will be no increase in fees and charges at MWR facilities in fiscal year 1982.

Although food and beverage prices may increase due to market fluctuations, Robinson said that the Pope MWR division is pledged to offer patrons the best facilities, programs and services at the lowest price.

As an example the golf course offers the lowest annual fees at any Air Force installation in the world. The Non-commissioned Officers' Open Mess has one of the largest variety of lunch menus worldwide. The Arts and Crafts Center also offers more classes conducted by professionals than any Air Force base.

MWR also has the largest funded construction program in its history. Projects totaling over $3 million are under design and will be completed in 1982.

Join Scouting Night

Boys 8-14 interested in Scouting should attend "Join Scouting Night" Sept. 24, 6:30-8:30 p.m., said Marilyn Loomis, District Publicity chairman for scouting.

Parents should bring boys 8-10 years old to the Pope Elementary School. Representatives from Pope's Pack 759 will explain the Scouting program on Pope and register boys and adults.

Following the Join Scouting Program the pack will hold its monthly meeting. A program is planned to include newly registered Cubs and their parents.

Troop 730 is holding an open house at the Scout Hut on Armistead Street, 6:30-8:30 p.m., for boys 11-14 years old interested in the Boy Scouts. Scout leaders and troop members will answer questions from boys and their parents. Troop members have planned activities that will let boys see some of the fun scouting at Pope has to offer.

For information about scouting on Pope call 497-8042 or 497-4125.

Family life seminar

A family life seminar will be at the Base Chapel Sept. 23 and 24 at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

The sessions will focus on job and marital satisfaction retention and problems associated with family separation. Participation is limited to 25 persons per seminar. Commanders, first sergeants and supervisors are encouraged to attend. Advance registration is required. Call Ext. 2676 to register.

A seminar for the general public will be held Sept. 23 at 7 p.m. at the Chapel. Participation is unrestricted and advance registration is not required.

Topics of discussion will include stress of Air Force life and ways to cope with it, the advantages versus disadvantages of military life, child care and other matters concerning Air Force people.

The seminar leader will be Dr. Gary Bowen, a senior member of Family Research and Analysis, Inc., an organization contracted by the Air Force to study family life concerns. He will present information gathered during two major surveys of Air Force families.

"The expertise of the resource leader and the growing concern of Air Force people to provide a happy, productive climate in which they can live and work, suggest these seminars will be useful to anyone involved in an Air Force career or working with Air Force people," said a Chapel spokesman.

Pope recognizes people

They are CMSgt. Earl P. Davis, Meritorious Service Medal with two oak leaf clusters, 317th Organizational Maintenance Squadron; MSgt. Robert L. Bolick, Meritorious Service Medal, 3rd Mobile Aerial Port Squadron; MSgt. Paul T. Lex, Meritorious Service Medal, 317th Field Maintenance Squadron; and Capt. Truman H. Bolden, Air Force Commendation Medal with one oak leaf cluster, Detachment 12, 1600th Management Engineering Squadron.

PTA membership drive

The Pope Elementary School Parent Teacher's Association is having a membership drive. Membership fees are $2 per family and the drive ends Sept. 25. The class with highest percentage of membership wins a prize. Contact Debbie Guy, 497-6591, for more information.

General Allen visits Pope

Gen. James R. Allen, commander in chief of the Military Airlift Command, made his first visit to Pope since assuming CINCMAC duties in late June. He arrived here Thursday morning (lower left) and was welcomed by Col. Edsel R. Field, 317th Tactical Airlift Wing commander, and Col. Jerry W. Angell, 317th Combat Support Group commander. During his brief stay, the general visited many areas including a review of the 317th Security Police Squadron (upper left) at guard change with Capt. Eugene P. Hindle, 317th Security Police Squadron commander. The general talks with airmen in the maintenance complex (above). He also visited the Fuels Branch of the 317th Supply Squadron (below) escorted by 1st Lt. Jose Rodríguez, chief of Fuels Branch. (U.S. Air Force photos by 2nd Lt. A.V. Stephenson)

Fitness Trail

'...great way to relax'

On July 20 the "Air Force Times" reported the first new Department of Defense physical fitness directive in 18 years has ordered all military people to take part in fitness programs regardless of age and that aerobics training is not enough.

To CMSgt. Ray Stroud, avionics superintendent with the 317th Avionics Maintenance Squadron, this is not surprising news.

The chief, a 20-year service veteran, believes the Air Force should place more emphasis on physical conditioning. He has discovered along with his wife and children, a uniquely challenging conditioning program available to everyone at Pope—The Fitness Trail.

The trail is a kind of obstacle course winding through the woods near the Noncommissioned Officers' Club. People jog at their own pace along pine needle-covered paths, stopping at designated points to complete exercises which are explained graphically at the location. Many of the exercises involve apparatus, some of which have been modified to accommodate differences in sex, age and physical ability.

"Not many people seem to know about the trail," said Sue Stroud, a sports enthusiast who recently won the 317th AMS's women's racketball tournament.

Mrs. Stroud, a housewife and mother of three, explained that she likes to run with the whole family when possible.

"You might say our hobby is physical fitness," she said. "The Fitness Trail is a diversion and great way to relax."

Chief Stroud has lost seven pounds since he began running the trail in June.

"I can do the trail in 39 minutes," he said. "Someone in top physical condition might do it in 35-38 minutes. If you run the course competitively you can expect to lose about four pounds."

Mrs. Stroud likes to run the trail because she can take it at her own speed. The soft mulch floor provides relief for a persistent back problem.

Chief Stroud believes that running the course regularly has improved not only his lung capacity, but his job performance.

"I need the exercise," he said. "I actually get sick and very sluggish if I don't get enough. I know that people smoke and drink coffee all day without ever exercising, and they seem to be sharp. I just can't do it. I have to get my heartbeat and breathing rate up to a certain level to be able to concentrate on my job."

Chief Stroud prefers the peace and solitude of the shaded woods to the bustle and confusion of the open road.

"No one yells at you to get out of the way in here," he explained. "You avoid car fumes and even at midday it is much cooler in here than on the road.

"The course, particularly at dusk, is very pretty," he continued. "As you're running the course and performing the exercises, you may even encounter squirrels and rabbits. They've become very tame in here."

Although Chief Stroud would like to see a more active fitness program in the Air Force he is not sure that a program on the scale of the 82nd Airborne Division's would be practical.

"We don't have the manpower or the time to have calisthenics on a daily basis," he explained, adding however, that this did not stop individuals from exercising on their own each day.

"In fact I recommend it," he added.

The chief believes that the trail, utilized seriously, can provide anyone's fitness requirements.

Pope Fest '81

4,000 people attend

Four thousand people came out to this year's Pope Fest activities Sept. 11-13, according to Morale, Welfare and Recreation estimates.

More than $1,600 was raised for recreational activities by MWR, squadrons and private organizations taking part.

The most money was raised by the 317th Organizational Maintenance Squadron and 317th Field Maintenance Squadron which took in $200 each. Other popular booths were the clown face painting booth sponsored by the Arts and Crafts Center and the refreshment tent run by the Bowling Alley employees. "The Clinic's booth was the best decorated," said Bob Drake, Pope Fest project officer.

"Preparation for the carnival involved the support of several squadrons on base," said Sgt. Jan McClain, assistant project officer. "Without their help, we couldn't host this annual event."

Another event was a softball game Saturday pitting teams made up of Pope Colonels and Chiefs. In the bottom of the seventh inning the score was 15-9 when the Colonels tied things up. The Chiefs came back to win the game in extra innings with a final score of 16-15.

CMSgt. Robert L. Hathcock, 317th Organizational Maintenance Squadron superintendent, was driving on Murchison Road Sept. 10 when a driver, coming from the other direction, allegedly ran a red light and came towards the chief's car for a head-on collision. At the last moment, Chief Hathcock hit his brakes and swerved to avoid a total head-on. Because of his fastened seatbelt, the chief walked away from the wreck without a scratch. A mechanic at the shop where the truck was towed said that he was surprised to see a car which had sustained such a severe impact and yet had no broken windshield glass. (U.S. Air Force photo by SrA.
