REPORT SUMMARY

Evaluation of the Defense Attaché Training Program, Project 2021-2005

What We Did. We evaluated development, governance, and oversight of the Defense Attaché Training Program.

What We Found. We found that the Joint Military Attaché School (JMAS) had paused pursuing a certification that could strengthen its training courses. We also found that JMAS did not consistently receive feedback intended to inform the relevancy and accuracy of its training because of unclear roles and responsibilities associated with information sharing and its governance board.

What We Recommended. We made recommendations to Agency management that, upon implementation, will strengthen the Defense Attaché Training Program. Our findings and recommendations provide valuable insight to Agency decision makers to use as they address risk gaps relating to our FY 2021 DIA Top Management Challenge—Leadership Controls and Oversight. Management agreed with our recommendations.
