Pope Fest '82 draws crowd of thousands

By Sgt. Tanya L. Lairamore

More than 7,000 people came out last weekend for three days of fun and games at the annual Pope Fest.

Squadrons operated game and refreshment booths at the fair and competed in contests to measure such skills as egg tossing.

The Johnson Family Circus put on six live performances at the Fest. Bands, dancers and theatrical performers put on shows throughout the weekend. In a mini-olympics contest toddlers competed for gold and silver "medals." Colonels and chiefs were pitted against each other in a softball game Saturday.

The prize for the best decorated booth went to the 317th Civil Engineering Squadron. First place sweepstakes prize in the inter-squadron competition went to the 317th Organizational Maintenance Squadron and second place to CE.

CE took the prize in the commanders' and first sergeants' egg toss and the dizzy relay. OMS won the quarter mile relay, horseshoes tournament, six-man tug-of-war, three-legged race, open tug-of-war, tent peg drive and water balloon toss.

The 40th Tactical Airlift Squadron won the darts tournament and the 317th Avionics Maintenance Squadron took the prize in the egg and spoon relay.

In the chiefs versus colonels game, the colonels came out on top with a resounding 12-2 victory.

Exchange pulls Tylenol

Dallas-Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules have been removed from retail stores run by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

AAFES merchandising officials made the decision after learning that cyanide-contaminated Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules had killed seven people in the Chicago area.

"We will pull all Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules out of our stores until we find out what happened," said an AAFES spokesman.

Investigators in Chicago have found that three production lots of the capsules were involved in the deaths. The lot number which appear on each bottle, are MC-2880, MD-1610 and MB-2738. AAFES officials said they removed all Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules from sale, regardless of the lot number.

Customers who wish to return the Extra-Strength capsules to a local exchange service will receive full refund.

The exchange service also sells Tylenol Elixer, Extra-Strength Tylenol tablets and Childrens' Tylenol tablets. These products are not involved in the recall and will continue to be sold in exchanges.

Pope sweeps media contest

Pope's Public Affairs staff won seven first place awards and one second to lead all Military Airlift Command bases in command-level judging of the annual Air Force News Media contest.

The Hercules Herald won first in its category of the Print Media division. Other first place winners in Print Media were 2nd Lt. Walter Thorp for Editorials and Commentaries, and Mr. Dave Davenport for Graphic Art.

In the Broadcast Media division, MSgt. William D. Barkley won for Radio Series and Special Radio Program News Segment Covering a One-Time Event. SSgt. Cynthia Hedrick took first in Radio Newscast and Radio Program for the Family.

A1C Andrew Knef received a second place in the Print Media Features category.

First place winners will be forwarded for Air Force-level judging in the Air Force News Media Contest. Winners at that level will compete in an inter-service contest of the coveted Thomas Jefferson awards.

In memory

Funeral services for Maj. Harley Steve Warren were Sunday in Valdese N.C., his hometown.

Major Warren was killed Sept. 25 when his jeep tripped a mine in Lebanon where he was assigned as a United Nations Truce Observer. "Chopper", as he was referred to by his many friends, was well known to the tactical airlift world. He flew C-130s at Dyess, Ching Chuan Kang and Little Rock AFB, but is probably best known for his duty as resource manager at the Manpower and Personnel Center.

He is survived by his parents, his 7-year-old son, Todd, and his wife, Carolyn, P.O. Box 222 Valdeese, NC 28690. "Chopper" was a dedicated Air Force officer, a devoted husband and father and a genuine friend to all who knew him.

Security Policeman wins award

SMSgt. Larry E. Sullivan, 317th Security Police Squadron, was recently awarded the Order of the Bayonet for the Defender Class.

The award, established in 1981 by Military Airlift Command Security Police, recognizes those who have made significant contributions to security and ground defense of air bases. Sergeant Sullivan is the ninth Security Policeman to receive the award.

The Order of the Bayonet has two classes; the Commander Class for those whose contributions have been highly significant-affecting major programs, and the Defender Class for others making major contributions.

Sergeant Sullivan received the award for extensive work with air base ground defense planning for European air bases, and extensive contributions to exercises designed to test these plans, including Cold Fire 1981, and REFORGER.

The Bayonet is a weapon for close-in defensive fighting, and for this reason

RETREAT

Time to face the music

MSgt. David Derrick
NCOIC Base Honor Guard

Retreat for the flag! What to do for retreat!

When you hear retreat being sounded this is what you should do under the following conditions:

In uniform, on foot, once you hear retreat being sounded you should stop, face the music (or flag if you can see it) and come to the position of the parade rest. On the first note of the National Anthem go to present arms. On the last note of the music, go to order arms and continue as you were.

If you are in the immediate area of the flag pole, you should stand at the position of parade rest until the flag is folded and clear of the area.

Out of uniform, you are to do the same as you would in uniform except you do not salute the flag but place your right hand over your heart. If you are wearing a hat, remove it and place it over the heart.

If you are in your car, you should bring the car to a halt and all occupants should sit at the position of attention until the music has finished.

Remember, when you hear retreat being sounded this means you should stop and pay respect to your country, not run and try to hide.

AES back from REFORGER

The remainder of the 36 1st Aeromedical Evacuation Squadron people deployed for REFORGER returned to Pope Sept. 22. Although tired and disheveled after 22 hours in transit, they were glad to be home, according to Capt. Larry Stamler, 1st AES spokesman.

The 1st AES is tasked to participate in several Joint Chiefs of Staff exercises per year. Their purpose is to practice and test the ability of the Tactical Aeromedical Evacuation System to evacuate combat casualties under a variety of combat and environmental conditions.

The 1st AES is the only active duty Tactical Aeromedical Evacuation Squadron, but comprises only three percent of the total tactical aeromedical evacuation capability. The remainder is provided by the National Guard and Air Force Reserve forces.

Normally the 1st AES does not deploy with these units, although there is considerable joint play during local exercises and training sessions. However during this exercise, the 1st was augmented by Aeromedical Evacuation Crews from the National Guard.

The units participating were the 167th AEF, West Virginia; 118th AES, Nashville, Tenn.; 139th AES, Schenectady, NY; and the 109th AEF, Minn. "Working together in the spirit of the total force policy, was an educational experience for all," Captain Stamler said. During 14 flights, 567 simulated casualties were administratively processed, given maintenance care and evacuated.

Army support was provided by the 68th Medical Group. In addition to providing 1st AES people with creature comforts such as billet tents, a field kitchen, showers, and latrines, the Army was able to exercise their own capabilities.

"Moultage, ambulance transport, and field hospital establishment, all played an important role in providing a realistic environment for the exercise," the Captain added. Patients were processed through the 32nd Combat Support Hospital prior to entering the evacuation system.

"It would be inappropriate not to mention the flying support, which was supplied by a variety of active duty and National Guard units" Captain Stamler said.

"It is especially good to see our own Pope Herc's when deployed. This time it was the 41st Tactical Airlift Squadron."

No room at Child Care Center

Why is it that since the inspector came through the base nursery, Pope people have no access to the nursery because Fort Bragg people have the nursery booked?

The Pope Child Care Center has experienced a space problem due to an Air Force requirement to lower caregiver/child ratios. This problem is Air Force wide and has affected many other child care centers. It is true, Army people have used our center. As a result of our space problem we are starting a more refined reservation system that enables weekly patrons to begin making reservations on Thursday for the following week and drop-in patrons to make reservations on Friday for the following week. Whenever we reach our capacity a waiting list is established and Air Force people have priority over any one else. Planning and use of the reservation system is important to insure the Child Care Center can assist you when you need their services.

An avoidable accident

By Bob Langston
317th Supply Squadron

On the afternoon Sept. 7, I came upon a accident scene involving an unidentified individual and a motorcycle.

Several vehicles ahead of me drove past the scene because, at first glance, there was nothing to indicate that there had been an accident. Just an individual lying neatly on the ground and a motorcycle lying on its side.

On a hunch, I decided to investigate. When I returned to the scene, I found the individual was bleeding from a head wound.

I tried in vain for several minutes to stop a passing motorist for assistance. Finally, someone stopped and went to summon the police and an ambulance.

While the ambulance attendants were aiding the accident victim, I looked at the entire accident scene. The individual had been riding on the side of the highway on an uneven surface without a helmet. The motorcycle had a slick tire on the rear and no license plates. Several uncovered bolt ends protruded from the handlebar. The gas tank was not secured tightly, the victim had gasoline on his clothes, but fortunately the gas did not ignite.

In addition to the head wound the individual had bruises to the chest area and legs. The victim had no protective gear on at all. A contributing factor to the accident was that the individual was riding a motorcycle on rough terrain while wearing a cast on his arm. This tended to reduce his ability to control his motorcycle in the event he hit a bump or rut.

The long delay in getting help to the victim was further lengthened by the fact that the victim carried no identification. While the victim was being loaded on the ambulance, a highway patrolman attempted to question the victim about the helmet and the disposition of the motorcycle. An Army individual tried to get information about the victim's assigned unit in order to notify appropriate personnel. These efforts were in vain, the victim was incoherent.

In summary, the lessons to be learned from this accident are: don't ride without a helmet, don't ride on rough terrain with a cast, don't ride without identification, don't ride with slick tires, and don't ride a motorcycle which isn't in proper mechanical condition.

This accident really could have been avoided.

Murphy's Law began at Edwards

By Sgt. Tanya L. Lairamore

The birth place of many great aeronautical achievements, Edwards AFB, Calif., is also the home of a famous axiom known as Murphy's Law. According to the saying, "if there is a possibility for something to go wrong, it will go wrong."

The expression came in to being back in 1949 when Capt. Ed Murphy was assigned to Edwards to work on a project with an experimental rocket-powered sled. During one of the tests Captain Murphy became frustrated with a malfunction caused by a technician's mistake.

Murphy lashed out at the man by saying, "If there's any way to do it wrong, he will."

Murphy's remark was picked up by George E. Nichols, a project manager who added it and the current variation to a collection of other "statements of reality" he had encountered during the project.

Later the project's excellent safety record was cited during a press conference. The record was credited to everyone's belief in Murphy's Law and their concerted efforts to avoid errors.

The media quickly played up Murphy's Law and within weeks the expression was being used in a variety of publications.

Since then Murphy's law has become thoroughly ingrained as a bit of Americana. Whole books have been written on variations of the law.

What started out as an Air Force safety slogan has gone a long way over the years. But we should all remember the original intent of the expression and stop accidents before they happen.

gifts from other military and civilian members can make things like these happen all over the world next year:

- The healing can continue through research and assistance programs of national health agencies.
- A retarded youngster can receive tender, loving care in a proper surrounding.
- A teenager can learn to swim in a YMCA or a Red Cross class.
- A young airman away from home for the first time will find a home away from home at the United Service Organization -- USO.
- A military family overseas can enjoy a weekend outing at a park sponsored by the National Recreation and Park Association.
- A young woman who is blind can receive educational materials through the American Foundation for the Blind.

Multiply these by the number of people helped, then multiply that total by the 100-plus voluntary CFC agencies. Then you'll get a fair idea of the extent of the services given through CFC funds.

The CFC makes it easier to help. CFC is many fund-raisers combined into one big, annual effort.

Another easy part of the CFC is the way you can give. You can give one single, large donation, or you can give all year with small amounts taken from your check by payroll deduction. Either way, your contribution is tax deductible.

No matter how you decide to give, give as generously as you can. True, inflation does take its toll on our pocket-books and we sometimes feel the pinch. But CFC comes only once a year, and helps so many, so much. We don't have to look far to see the needs.

What will I do without pay?

An AFNS editorial

What will I do?

There's no way of telling how many Air Force people, especially those in lower pay grades, asked themselves that question in early September. Newspapers and network newscasters told the world the Defense Department could run out of money and military members might not be paid on Sept. 15.

The problem was a supplemental appropriation bill that included funds to pay military people. It looked like the bill might not have been enacted into law in time to meet the mid-month payday. The question, and the possible problems Air Force people and their families could have faced, were resolved when the supplemental appropriation became law on Sept. 10. The pay would be there on Sept. 15.

But, what if the pay had been delayed? What if "What'll I do?" became reality for an untold number of Air Force people? Would they have had to cope with personal financial problems alone?

Not exactly. Working within the laws of the United States, the Air Force and supporting agencies had taken a number of steps to help reduce hardships a pay delay could have caused.

Despite uncertainties about the supplemental appropriation becoming law, accounting and finance officials processed the mid-September pay normally, assuming the supplemental would be enacted. They also prepositioned checks and financial documents to cover the Sept. 15 pay.

Both actions ensured that Air Force people would receive prompt payments upon veto override or when appropriation had been enacted.

Air Force Secretary Verne Orr wrote to all financial institutions that participate in the "Sure Pay" program. He asked them to do all they could to assist until the Air Force was permitted by law to meet its military payroll. During past financial crises, military bankers had been very responsive in helping Air Force people.

If mid-month pay had been delayed, Air Force Commissary Service stores would have followed a "hold check" policy for all military people until the Sept. 15 pay had been received.

The Air Force Aid Society had $15 million available to loan to military members who faced financial hardship due to a pay delay. These funds were made available to the accounting and finance offices and, with commander's approval, airmen could have received aid without formal application through their local Aid Society office.

Army and Air Force Exchange Service would not have pressed customers for layaway or delayed-payment plan installments. Returned checks would have been redeposited, and AAFES would not have entered names in the dishonored check system until the midmonth pay had been received.

A lot of quiet planning went into these preparations. They were not needed this time. But, you should know about them. The Air Force -- the people and the organization -- was ready to help.

AFFES explains film policy

When it comes to entertainment, a good bet is your Army Air Force Federal Exchange Service movie theater.

According to Albert G. Ferguson, exchange manager at Pope and Fort Bragg, AAFES movie patrons can enjoy some of the year's biggest and best box office hits, at savings over commercial theater prices.

The Fort Bragg and Pope theaters are part of one of the largest entertainment circuits in the world, Mr. Ferguson said. AAFES operates some 1,120 movie theaters worldwide including 650 free admission theaters serving remote areas, Mr. Ferguson stated.

How does AAFES select a film? Do they ever cut or censor them? These are some of the questions occasionally asked by exchange moviegoers Mr. Ferguson stated.

"The military theater market equates to a series of small civilian communities," he said. A first run theater in a major metropolitan area can routinely expect several thousand people to view a given film, but attendance at AAFES movies is only a fraction of that.

With U.S. film production declining in numbers each year, selection by AAFES becomes a major task according to the Exchange Manager. Since the movie industry currently produces only enough films to provide three new movies per week AAFES must revive the better films to make its mission requirement of 5 different pictures a week Mr. Ferguson explained.

"AAFES considers only those films with a rating assigned by the Motion Picture Association of America," he said.

"To find a product AAFES reviews a film's acceptance by civilian audiences and trade journal and national media reviews," Mr. Ferguson said.

"Each film is screened and judged on audience appeal and projected patronage among military audiences. Screening is done at HQ AAFES in Dallas by our Motion Picture Branch."

According to Mr. Ferguson only 70 percent of available movies last year met AAFES criteria and were actually procured. For example, "X" rated movies are not selected.

"From time to time people have tried to press AAFES not to procure movies of 'sensitive' or 'controversial' nature. Censorship over movies is not exercised by AAFES for the simple reason that it is not practiced by the government for the population in general," Mr. Ferguson stated.

"We recognize that within our broad customer base, some patrons may find some films offensive rather than entertaining. We try to alert them in advance with expanded program synopses to include comments on any film which may contain objectionable material," the exchange manager said.

Motion Pictures are just one medium that reaches AAFES patron. Others include network and cable TV, video cassettes and discs, magazines and books - all available routinely to the public, many containing sensitive or controversial material.

"Only the motion picture industry we believe has taken the lead by qualifying its product through use of a rating system," Mr. Ferguson said. "Similarly, we believe those patrons able to view 'R' movies can understand that the inclusion of sensitive or controversial material in a movie in no way implies the endorsement of such actions by the AAFES or the respective military departments."

"In the final analysis," Mr. Ferguson said, "it is the public that dictates the type of movies made. Patronage at the box office is the message to the producer of what the public wants. While the mission of the military is unique in our society, its members are a cross section of American society at large."

"The military community's taste in films can be expected to parallel that of the civilian community," Mr. Ferguson added. "AAFES will continue to supplement MPAA ratings with program synopses warning of potential objectionable material but we will not cut or censor any film."

Second widows, dependents home construction to begin

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. (AFNS)—Construction of a second Air Force enlisted men's widows and dependents home at Fort Walton Beach, Fla., will begin with a ground breaking Oct. 19. Some $10 million is expected to be raised in a money-raising campaign for the 256-unit project named in honor of comedian Bob Hope. Bob Hope Village was named for Mr. Hope for his more than 40-years' service to the military community.

Completion of the project will bring to 377 the total number of apartment units. Teresa Village, with its 121 units, was the first enlisted men's widows home.

A pledge of $1.5 million, announced by Harry J. Gray, chairman and chief executive of the United Technologies Corp., kicked off the campaign. In announcing the pledge, Mr. Gray invited members of the U.S. aerospace industry and members of the Air Force to support the foundation.

"The women the foundation serves have endured a great sacrifice for their country. Along with their husbands, they formed the backbone of the Air Force."

For more information about the campaign project, write: Bob Hope Village, 572 Mooney Road, Fort Walton Beach, Fla. 32548. Or contact Tom Dwyer at 1-315-469-1412.

was selected as a symbol of the mission of the Security Police Air Base Ground Defense troops who are tasked with the close-in defense of Air Bases. Col. Samuel E. Stocks, chief of Security Police for the Military Airlift Command, presented the award to Sergeant Sullivan.

Bank cashes checks

The Pope branch of the First Citizens Bank will cash personal checks for up to $50 at no charge for civilian employees and military people stationed at Pope and their families until the Base Exchange is reopened.

There will still be a $1 service charge to non-account holders to cash government payroll checks. Other checks will be considered on an individual basis.

Prices up for cigarettes

Major tobacco companies have announced cost price increases for cigarettes, necessitating a price increase by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service effective Oct. 25.

The increase will apply only to cartons of tax-paid cigarettes in the Continental United States, Alaska and Hawaii.

Tax-free cigarette prices at overseas locations will remain the same. Tax paid king and regular size cigarettes will increase from $5.50 to $5.90 a carton and the price of 100 and 120 millimeter cartons will be raised from $3.60 to 6.10. Individual packs in all lengths will remain at 65 cents.

Moped laws explained

If you operate a moped in North Carolina and on Pope you are not required to have drivers' license, state license tags or insurance.

To operate a moped on Pope you must be in compliance with Air Force regulation 125-15, and Pope Supplement 1, Motor Vehicle Registration and Related Requirements. Operators should contact the base safety office to be scheduled for course seven safety class just as motorcycle operators are required too.

Upon completion of the course, operators must contact their unit vehicle registration monitor for verification of course completion and insurance of Department of Defense Form 2220, Vehicle Registration, registration tab and base sticker.

You must be 16 to operate a moped and must wear a helmet, eye protectors, shoes and use the headlight.

These requirements pertain to motorcycle operators and owners with three exceptions. Motorcycle operators must have insurance, drivers' license and license tags.

Some Moving Expenses can be recouped

SCOTT AFB, Ill. (MNS) -- Military Airlift Command people who complete a permanent-change-of-station move during 1982 can recover some out-of-pocket expenses at tax time, even if they do not itemize deductions, according to MAC officials.

By keeping careful records and filing Moving Expense Form 3903, taxpayers can recoup some non-reimbursed expenses of moving their households.

Officials say that since these expenses incurred by a member on a house-hunting trip--travel, meals and lodging costs--and temporary lodging expenses upon arrival at the new duty station, are valid moving expense adjustments but not to exceed a total of 1,500 in combined costs for both categories.

Other expenses for which the government does not reimburse the member also be claimed on the moving expense form. These include the cost of additional insurance coverage on household goods en route; costs of shipping pets; charges for renting trailers, roof racks and other moving accessories; extra expenses resulting from shipping a car from overseas; and added costs assessed for exceeding the member's weight allowance.

Members who keep a log during their PCS move may find that their expenses for travel, meals and lodging during the move itself exceed the amount which the Air Force reimburses them. If so, the balance may be claimed by entering the expenses and the amount of reimbursement on the Form 3903.

An adjustment may be claimed for costs of terminating and re-establishing a residence. This includes sales commissions, titles and escrow fees, attorney's fees and costs to settle an unexpired lease or buy a new lease.

All moving expenses must be offset by reimbursements or PCS payments made by the Air Force to the military member and his or her dependents. The total moving expense adjustment may not exceed $3,000 per move.

Pamphlets describing moving costs are available from the Internal Revenue Service, and your base legal office can also help you determine what expenses, if any, you may be able to recover.
