Aircrew prepares for mission

Pope crew support Quick Thrust

A composite flying force of Air Force, Navy and the Marines took part in a training exercise, called Quick Thrust 1-82, at Fort Stewart, Ga., April 23. The pilots, operating fighter and tactical aircraft flew simulated combat missions in support of training activities of the Army's 24th Infantry Division.

Pope sent three of its C-130 Hercules transport aircraft and a comparable number of crews to participate in the exercise. According to base officials, there were a total of 25 Hercules drops and 11 airland missions in support of the resupply efforts.

"For the first time since I can remember, we will be dropping real Army materials into a hostile environment," said Capt. Larry Gore, Pope's tactics planner and member of the mission control team. "In this exercise, a hostile environment employs threat simulators and opposing units."

The 317th Tactical Airlift Wing, here, provided airlift command for the Hercules aircraft deployed; however, 9th Air Force at Shaw AFB, S.C. is headquarters for the exercise.

Other exercise participants will include units of the Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard. "Quick Thrust 1-82" will give fighter aircrews experience in flying a variety of missions in support of ground units, the aircrews will also practice attacking heavily defended targets similar to those they might face during actual combat.

Many of the fighter aircraft deployed and operated from airfields near Fort Stewart, including Savannah

Municipal Airport, Ga.; Hunter Army Airfield, Ga.; Charleston AFB, S.C.; Beaufort Marine Corps Air Station, S.C.; as well as other operating locations in the South East.

The aircraft made extensive use of overwater training areas east of Savannah and a special exercise area immediately south of Fort Stewart.

Extensive precautions were taken to reduce or eliminate any adverse impact on local communities. Aircraft operations have been restricted to reduce jet noise to the lowest level consistent with the training objective of the exercise.

Air Force aircraft carried out such missions as close air support, battlefield interdiction, dissimilar air combat, tactical intercepts, aerial refueling, and air radar surveillance.

Tactical airlift forces flew simulated resupply missions in support of the Army. Search and Rescue forces practiced infiltrating helicopters into "hostile" territory to pick up simulated downed aircrews.

In addition, Air Force and Air National Guard fighter aircraft simulated attacks on two participating Navy aircraft carriers, the USS FORRESTAL and the USS CARL VINSON. The carriers in turn, were "defended" by Navy F-4 Phantoms and F-14 Tomcats.

The Marines flew F-4s from Marine Air Group 31, Marine Corps Air Station, Beaufort, S.C.

In addition to the flying units, several Air Force and Air National Guard support units took part in the exercise.

Combat techniques, aerial artistry highlight Pope open house

The Air Force and Army will showcase some of the finest combat techniques and aerial artistry seen anywhere as Pope and Fort Bragg host their annual Open House on the Pope flightline May 22.

Highlighting the Open House will be an air show, scheduled to begin at noon. Military Airlift Command C-130

Hercules Transports, the Army's 82nd Aviation Battalion and 82nd Airborne's sport parachute team will perform helicopter and jump demonstrations for an estimated 80,000 guests.

Military and civilian exhibits, displays and military working dog demonstrations are to be featured.

Various concession stands will offer a variety of food and drink. Concert performances will be given by Fort Bragg's 82nd Airborne Band.

The gates will open for visitors at 9 a.m., and will close at 5 p.m.

Rote returners bolster AFAP total

With final figures in after the return of Pope people from rotation in Europe, Pope's contribution to the Air Force Assistance Fund totalled $28,249, 149 percent of the base's projected goal, according to AFAP project officer Maj. Michael Obrien.

The 39th Tactical Airlift Squadron led the way among those returning, collecting 175 percent of their goal. Other squadrons bolstered by returning members was the 317th Headquarters Squadron, 317th Field Maintenance Squadron, 317th Transportation Squadron, 317th Avionics Maintenance Squadron and the 317th Organizational Maintenance Squadron.

AWACS assignments opened to women

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — Secretary of the Air Force Verne Orr has announced that women will be assigned to flight and mission crew positions aboard United States airborne warning and control system aircraft.

In the past, women were excluded from duties aboard the E-3A AWACS. Now the crew positions will be open to women officers and enlisted members. Women aircrew members are expected to begin AWACS training by late summer at Tinker AFB, Ok.

Opening the new career field was based on an assessment by the Air Force chief of staff and senior commanders of current and anticipated AWACS requirements. The Air Force has determined that the E-3A is a combat-support aircraft rather than a combat aircraft. By public law, women may not be assigned as crewmembers aboard combat aircraft.

The KC-135 Stratotanker and C-141 Starlifter transport are examples of other combat-support aircraft to which women are presently assigned.

North Carolina primary delayed

The North Carolina primary, scheduled for May 4, has been delayed to an unspecified date. Absentee voters who applied for a ballot in the May 4 primary will not receive a ballot until the new primary date has been set. State election officials have targeted June 1 as the earliest possible date for the new primary; however, it could take place as late as August, they say.

On Tuesday at a ceremony at the Officers' Club Lt. Col. John W. Handy will take over as commander of the 317th Organizational Maintenance Squadron from Maj. Phillip L. Harris. Colonel Handy is now the operations officer for the 41st Tactical Airlift Squadron. Major Harris will be maintenance project officer for this year's Volant Rodeo before leaving for Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala. where he will attend the Air Command Staff College.

School board meets

The reelection of board members was confirmed and an update on the status of the 1982/83 school budget presented at Monday's meeting of the Fort Bragg School Board. Board chairman MSgt. Lee Brown announced the resignation of Capt. Al DeCastro and wife, Mary from their board seats. Applications are now being taken from all qualified residents of the school system for the Pope seat and an at large seat which includes Pope's district.

Briefing answers Air Force questions

If you've ever wondered what SBP means, what happens if your spouse dies on active duty, or how the commissary prices items, you will want to attend the 1982 Personal Affairs Orientation.

This year's orientation will take place May 11 from 9 a.m.-2 p.m. in the NCO Club ballroom, according to personnel officials.

Last year's orientation was the best attended in recent years," according to 2nd Lt. Terry Stephens, personal affairs section. "We are looking for even better things this year," he added.

"I you've been in the Air Force a number of years," Lieutenant Stevens said, "things change. That's the reason for this orientation. People from the Legal Office, Casualty and Survivor Benefits Section, Commissary, Exchange, Chaplain's Office, Family Services, Personal Affairs and the Clinic will brief on old and new policies within their specialties that the Air Force members and their families need to know. The briefing is especially beneficial to new Air Force wives."

Reservations are available through squadron wives' organizations or by calling Family Services, Ext. 2119 by May 6.

Free nursery reservations may be made through Virginia Green at 394-4323. A free lunch also will be provided.

Persons unable to attend the entire briefing should consider coming for any portion of the program which is convenient.

Junior Officer of The Quarter

1st Lt. Donna Bullard has been the chief of Personnel Utilizations since January. Her office is responsible for assignments, manning, the intro-program and the Personnel Readiness Center during all mobility contingencies. Lieutenant Bullard attributes her success to the people who work for her and the support of her commander, Maj. William Neumann. "This is the best job I've had," she said. "The people are great and the responsibilities are challenging." The Sacramento, Calif. native has been in the Air Force two and one half years. She is the past president of the Junior Officers' Council. "I was thrilled at the news," she said.

Air Force Association views

(Editor's note: This article, written by CMSgt. Willie Burnett, appeared in the Tinker Air Force Base Take-Off during AFA's 1979 Membership Drive.)

In spite of the efforts that the Air Force expends each year in dollars and in manhours to encourage its military member to vote, we still have one of the worst voting records of any such group in the United States. Each organization on each installation has a voting officer who is intimately familiar with each state's voting requirements and still less than 30 percent of military members vote.

TDY money can buy trouble

By SA Leonard E. Patterson
AFOSI DET 2101

Want to make a little extra money on your next Temporary Duty Assignment? That kind of cash is perfect for buying you a lot of trouble.

Last year, some Air Force members came up with some pretty unique ways to make money while TDY. Since the Air Force Office of Special In-

Of course there are a number of reasons, no doubt, why we collectively do not vote, but in any case, we do need representation in Washington and I think we all agree on that. There are several organizations which dedicate a large part of their total budget to that end - the Air Force Association is one such organization.

I had the honor and privilege of seeing first-hand the kinds of things they do that contribute significantly to the "Bluc Suiters" welfare, and of course since my interests are primarily with enlisted people in general and more specifically those at Tinker, I will talk to that aspect of being an enlisted member of the Air Force Association.

I would first like to dispel any notions that the AFA is an officer oriented organization. Thirty percent of the blue suit population who are members are enlisted, and that figure is growing larger each year. That is of course an indication that we recognize the need to be an AFA member.

Secondly, I would like to mention just a few of the Air Force programs that are supported by the AFA where enlisted people are the sole benefactor:

Investigation is always looking for ways to help the Air Force reduce travel expenses, we invited a number of these "financial wizards" to explain their methods. Admittedly, some were a little reluctant at first, but their stories came out in the end and their commanders insure that they each got "good value" for the money they "earned."

A good example is a sergeant who recently purchased himself a reduction in rank and 14 days extra duty. Others bought similar packages and were even invited to provide "matching funds."

Some people ask why the Air Force bothers with these "small fry" and even if the Air Force thinks it is important, "why should I?"

Well, the Air Force thinks it is important because thousands of dollars the 12 Outstanding Airmen of the Year program, of which I was a selectee in 1977, was instituted by the AFA when there were 23 selectees. They have continually sought to upgrade the quality of the program since its inception and now have it fine tuned to the point where it is probably the most prestigious award program in the Air Force for enlisted people.

The AFA hosts the World Wide Senior Enlisted Advisor's Conference each year, providing a forum from which issues of interest to you may be discussed. The AFA Enlisted Council is staffed by the 12 Outstanding Airmen of the Year for the year for which they were selected and provide a broad based source of information to the AFA on issues concerning Air Force enlisted people. The AFA then goes on record as a supporter of a particular issue which is subsequently supported before Congressional hearings by AFA Representatives. As a direct result of one council's input in 1964, the position of Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force was established in 1967.

Likewise, AFA efforts sparked by support of the Enlisted Council, led to are lost by each command, every year, because people cheat on their TDY vouchers. Add that up throughout the Air Force and it comes to a lot of tools, tires, bombs and whatever else the Air Force needs to operate. You should care because every dollar someone steals from the Air Force costs you too. How does that work? Think about it. If the Air Force loses a dollar, taken from you in taxes, it must replace it by getting another dollar from you.

What can you do about it? We make it easy for you. If you think someone is defrauding the government, through travel vouchers or any other way, The Inspector General, Lt. Gen. Howard Leaf, guarantees that your suspicions will be taken seriously and investigated thoroughly by specially trained people and has provided three ways for you to the establishment of the Community College of the Air Force and to degree granting authority. Other issues which AFA supports include, but are not limited to:

--Full travel benefits for junior enlisted families

--Enlisted per diem comparable to officer per diem

--Repeal of curbs that bar enlisted band members from moon lighting as musicians

--Enlistment and reenlistment bonuses for active duty and reserve component members

--A fully funded Airmen Education and Commissioning Program

--Direct commissioning of qualified enlisted members.

The list is endless.

With organizations such as the AFA to represent us in Washington, why do we need unionization? I say we don't. Not only is the AFA interested in us and our welfare, they are also dedicated Americans who believe in America and in doing only those things that will serve to strengthen it, and not divide it.

Join the AFA as soon as the opportunity presents itself.

tell someone about your suspicions. The Air Force Fraud, Waste and Abuse Hotline can be called any time, day or night. It is Autovon 227-1061. If you use the Hotline, you don't even need to use your name if you don't want to.

Another way to report fraud is to call the base AFOSI Detachment at 4264. Any agent will be glad to take your information and, if you wish, your name will not be revealed to anyone without your permission.

If neither of these avenues appeal to you, then write to AF/IGO, Pentagon, Rm 5D286, Washington, D.C., 20330. If you don't want your name to be revealed, you can leave the letter unsigned or just say that you don't want your name used and your wishes will be respected.

Fraud, waste and abuse - who, me?

By Capt. Donna Barnett, commander
317th Services Squadron

How many times have you walked out of your office or work area with government property? It might simply be a piece of pipe left over from a plumbing job on base or a pad of paper or a pen that you didn't even think about. In these cases, the intent is not malicious or premeditated, but still represents the waste of government resources.

It's not just simple pilferage, but can range from large scale fraud by overpricing of materials by a civilian contractor working for the government, to fraud by married personnel using a meal card, to mismanagement of resources. These situations are resulting in enormous losses of government resources each year, costing hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The Military Airlift Command has recently begun an intense drive to identify and prevent fraud, waste, and abuse within the command. This action comes in conjunction with a new hard line approach taken by the Air Force. It begins with us. It's our responsibility to help identify existing and potential cases of FWA. The real secret is to prevent it in the first place.

Look around your work area and see what can be done to better utilize all resources. If you identify an area that could prevent the waste of materials, you may help to save the Air Force valuable dollars. If you further submit your idea in the form of a suggestion on an AF Form 1000, you may bag some valuable dollars for yourself. If you discover that an existing case of FWA cannot be solved locally, the Air Force Inspector General's office has established a hotline to investigate reported cases of FWA. To report fraud, waste, or abuse, call autovon 277-1061. Supply officials with as much information as possible. Without specific information, reported cases cannot be investigated. Your calls are confidential.

What's the ultimate goal? It is to totally eliminate fraud, waste and abuse. It's up to us to do our part to save our resources. So the next time you see a case of FWA, regardless of how large or small, report it. It'll make work better for us all.

MAC Senior Enlisted Advisor visits Pope

Chief Davis addressed Pope audience at NCO Club
'I am the CINCMAC's voice on enlisted matters'

(Editor's note: CMSgt. Harry Davis, Military Airlift Command, senior enlisted advisor visited Pope April 24 to speak at the awards banquet of the Pope Chapter of the Air Force Sergeant's Association. While here Chief Davis consented to be interviewed by SSgt. Cynthia Hedrick, 317th Public Affairs Division.)

Q. What exactly does your job as MAC senior enlisted advisor entail?

A. To put it in a nutshell, I am the enlisted voice for the Commander In Chief Military Airlift Command, Gen. James R. Allen. My job is to go out in the field and let him know the state of the health, morale and welfare of the troops and at the same time let the troops know what the CINCMAC is thinking.

Q. What is the biggest gripe you get from young enlisted folks?

A. For the young troops in the dormitories it's the dorms. They are just too crowded for the life style of our young people. Today young folks want their privacy. These buildings are also old — for the most part they were built in the Korean War.

We would also like to see our troops in the dorms get separate rations, so they would have the choice of eating in the dining halls or not.

Q. Why has the Air Force historically recruited the highest quality of troops?

A. We are an all-volunteer force and right now we have 30,000 people knocking on the door to get in. We can afford to be very selective and take only the best. Last year we met all our recruiting goals and more than 95 percent of these people had high school diplomas. Of course whenever there is a downward trend in the economy first term enlistment and retention are up.

Q. What will happen when the economy picks back up?

A. The economy is only one reason why we were able to meet our recruiting goals. Recent pay raises have given us comparable pay with the civilian sector. If we can maintain this pay comparability, come up with a new G.I. Bill and come up with per diem equity we will continue to be successful. Other changes that would help immeasurably would be improved CHAMPUS benefits and to provide better travel entitlements so we don't have people paying $1,000-7,000 out of pocket to move.

Q. What did the recently completed Gallant Eagle Exercise say about our airlift capabilities?

A. It demonstrated we can deploy troops and equipment rapidly in remote areas. This was the biggest air-drop operation since World War II. Although we at MAC feel that we need more airlift, we've consistently shown that we can do the job whenever asked.

Q. Here at Pope the military is strongly supported by the civilian community. How does this compare with other MAC bases?

A. Pope has one of the closest relationships with the civilian community that I have seen. Around the country civilians are on a high as far as the military is concerned. This is very healthy and something we've always needed.

Q. Did the Iranian situation contribute to the surge of patriotism in the country and is that feeling waning?

A. The release of the hostages probably did more than anything else to cause the resurgence of patriotism in this country. In the late 60s and early 70s it wasn't fashionable to talk about patriotism but now people all over the country are not afraid to tell you they love America. The fact that the President is not afraid to wave the flag has also contributed to an increase in patriotism. I think General Allen put it best when he said the best social program is the preservation of freedom.

New sign

Employees of the Stone Sign Company installed a huge sign on Hangar 712 April 19-20. The work, part of the refurbishment of the building was completed in a day and one half. The sign is made of baked enamel joined together in interlocking pieces. The American flag in the sign is 15x25 feet installed in 15 sections. The MAC and wing insignia are 14½x14½ feet each, installed in six sections. R.B. Stone, owner of the Stone Sign Company believes the sign is the largest in the area and is easily the largest his company has ever installed.

Recall of Purolator fuel filters

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) is aiding Purolator Products, Inc., in the voluntary recall of defective fuel filters.

Purolator has recalled two fuel filters, Models GF-24 and GF-24M, because they may contain a sealing defect which allows gasoline to leak during normal operation. Purolator says that a fire could start under the hood of the vehicle as a result of the leak, although no cases of fire or personal injury have been reported. AAFES stocks only the GF-24 filter, which sold for $1.35 in its retail stores. Exchange officials urge customers who have bought the GF-24 filter to return it to the exchange for full refund. The defective filters were produced between April and August 1981 and are imprinted in blue. Purolator informed AAFES that new shipments of filters bearing red printing are of assured quality.

Volunteers Gear Up For Sunday-On-The-Square

Plans are underway for the ninth annual Sunday-On-The-Square, Fayetteville's traditional multi-arts celebration in an urban setting, scheduled May 2. Local attorney Herb Thorp is chairman for the eighth year in a row, joined by the many volunteers and staff of the Arts Council of Fayetteville/Cumberland County, which sponsors Sunday-On-The-Square.

A steering committee, composed of community volunteers from throughout the county along with Pope and Fort Bragg, is now making plans for this popular community festival of arts, crafts and entertainment. It's all centered around the historic Market House in downtown Fayetteville from 1 to 6 p.m.

The Sunday-On-The-Square liaisons from Pope are Col. Tom Stiles and Robin Stiles, and the official representative from Fort Bragg is Morale Support Activities Officer Dennis Allen. A multitude of volunteers, 300 or more, help out at Sunday-On-The-Square—it's a true community festival made possible by grand-scale community support.

About 20,000 festival-goers enjoyed last year's grand collection of arts, crafts and entertainment. Right now through April 26, the Arts Council is registering this year's artists and craftspeople to display, demonstrate and sell their work at Sunday-On-The-Square. This year Sunday-On-The-Square will feature live entertainment stages, including a new area for pop and rock music in Cross Creek Park. Artists, craftspeople and entertainers should contact the Arts Council at 822 Arsenal Avenue, phone 323-1776, for application forms.

This is no cheap pizza.

Oh, sure, we could cut down on the size, use artificial cheese, skimp on the items and then sell it two for one. But we just don't believe in doing business that way.

At Domino's Pizza, we believe in large helpings and quality ingredients. Why, that's why people love pizza. And we think that's where the value is. For over 20 years, we've been making the best pizza we know how, and we've been delivering it free, in 30 minutes or less. Call us, tonight.
