Election Race Begins

The starting gates are open and the race for Spring Lake Board of Alderman has begun.

The filing book officially opened Monday and two residents entered their names for the board.

Spring Lake incumbent Mayor Vernon Hobson was the first to file Monday morning to keep his seat on the board. Hobson lives on Harrell Street in Spring Lake.

Second to enter her name was Diane Duncan Sherrell, who is running for alderman the second time.

Sherrell lives on Lake Avenue. Candidates will be able to enter the non-partisan race until noon, Aug. 7. The filing book was opened early this year. The election won't be until Nov. 3.

All six seats on the board are up for grabs this year. The five candidates with the highest number of votes will be the new city board of alderman. The mayor's race is counted separately.

Her first run for office in 1985 was unsuccessful.

Chamber To Meet Thursday

Hershell Barbour, crime prevention officer with the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department, will be the guest speaker at Thursday's Spring Chamber of Commerce meeting.

The Chamber will meet 1 p.m. at the Western Steer on Bragg Boulevard. Barbour has been with the sheriff's department eight years and advises neighborhood and community crime watches on techniques to prevent crimes.

A former broadcaster, Barbour built the first Spring Lake radio station.

He will speak on crime prevention and the importance of neighborhood crime watch.

Parade Delayed, But Still Enjoyed

Despite a 45-minute delay, parade-watchers enjoyed a pleasant July Fourth commemoration parade Saturday featuring floats, horses and dignitaries.

The parade was late getting started due to the late arrival of the Olympic Festival Torch which made its way down Main Street, carried by John Cox who handed off to Davey Tenhet at the start of the parade.

As the torch and marchers began their walk down Main Street, toward the reviewing stand, Mayor Vernon Hobson asked for a moment of silence in honor of the men who lost their lives during last week's C-130 crash during the Air Capabilities Exercises.

In the background, the chants of the marching unit from Fort Bragg could be heard as the people bowed their heads.

But the spirit quickly lightened as the parade participants marched down the street to waving crowds.

The parade moved to Mendoza Park, but walkers stopped at the end of Main Street to avoid any traffic mishaps. At Mendoza Memorial Park, children were the big winners for the day as a dunking booth, HBoBot, pony rides and a "lockup" provided giggles and laughs. There were also field games and plenty of food and soda to keep the fun going through the warm afternoon.

Despite the overcast skies and threatening clouds, rain stayed away to allow celebrants to enjoy the day.

Investigation Continues Into Fiery C-130 Crash

By Jennifer Millelli Mullen

As the military grieved, the investigation continues this week into the cause of the crash of a C-130 last Wednesday in front of thousands of horrified spectators on Fort Bragg during a low-altitude maneuver.

"It's the first time they've had a major accident involving this technique," said Capt. Brian Irving of the Pope Air Force Base Public Affairs Office.

Four Pope Air Force Base crewmen and one Fort Bragg soldier on the ground died while the crew was attempting to demonstrate the low-altitude drop of a Sheridan tank from the bowels of a C-130.

About 4,000 people were watching the exercises during the annual air capabilities exercise on the Sicily Drop Zone.

Dead after the crash are Pope airmen Cpt. Gary Bardo, 31, pilot of the aircraft; First Lt. John Keiser III, 28, navigator; Tech. Sgt. Timothy Matar, 32, loadmaster; Airman First Class Albert G. Dunse, 23, loadmaster, and Army soldier Staff Sgt. Douglas L. Hunter, 25.

Surviving the fiery crash are Lt. Marc A. Lenke, 26, co-pilot, and Sgt. Tony P. Holmes, 28, flight engineer. Lenke and Holmes were admitted to Womack Army Hospital, then flown to the burn unit at Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston in Texas.

Lenke is listed in critical condition while Holmes has been upgraded to serious.

Public Affairs Officer Irving said the names of the men working on the month-long investigation into the accident would not be released due to confidentiality.

But usually an investigation of this type involves a five-member team brought in from other Air Force divisions. They have 30-days to complete their initial report, but it may take months until the final report is completed.

"They are very thorough and meticulous," Irving said. "They spend most of their time ruling out possibilities."

The purpose of the safety investigation is to prevent the accident from re-occurring, he said.

The final report will be in two parts, a statement of facts which may be released, and the testimony, which will not be released.

"The cause of the crash may not ever be released," Irving said.

The confidentiality of the testimony is kept in order to protect those who speak to investigators.

"It cannot be used against them," Irving said.

This enables the investigators to get to the true cause of the mishap, he said.

Unexpected

The crash occurred about 10:20 a.m. last Wednesday during the first part of the Airborne capabilities exercise. The morning's events had been delayed due to rain, but spectators eagerly awaited the day's show.

A paratrooper drop was performed to the "oohs" and "aahs" of those watching. The crowd also burst into applause as they watched a huge C-130 land on a short dirt runway, disgorge about 20 dignitaries then take-off again.

Audience members watched with anticipation as another C-130 began its descent to drop a Sheridan tank just about 100 feet from the reviewing stands.

The audience watched in horror as the plane struck the runway, breaking off its tailgate and spewing dust and dirt into the air.

People began crying and saying "oh no!" as the plane swerved past the bleachers, into two jeeps at the end of the runway, killing Army soldier Hunter. The plane plowed into a stand of trees at the end of the runway and burst into flames sending billows of thick, black smoke rolling into the sky.

As the acrid smoke and shrapnel began to blow toward spectators, official voices asked spectators to return to their seats, then to the waiting buses.

Soon after the crash, the audience was taken to the firepower demonstration at a separate site.

The Spring Lake Fire Department was called out to help with the fire, but the truck and firefighters were not needed, said Fire Chief Patrick Stevens.

Spring Lake Town Supervisor Richard Higgins was aboard a C-130 which landed, disgorged distinguished visitors then took off again.

"You see it and it's like it's not real," Higgins said after the crash. "Everything becomes routine and we don't see the danger that's inherent in this type of thing."

Crash Victims Honored

Friends and family gathered Monday afternoon at Pope Air Force Base to honor the memories of the four Air Force men who died in last week's crash.

Citing their courage and dedication, Base Commander Col. Edward N. Brya recognized Capt. Gary Bardo, Capt. John Keiser, Tech. Sgt. Timothy Matar and Airman 1st Class Albert Dunse.

The men died during a LAPSE exercise at Fort Bragg last Wednesday during a public demonstration.

About 500 people gathered at Pope Theatre to listen to comments and music in honor of the fallen.

"We come together today to share our common grief for the unexpected loss of our friends and loved ones," Brya said during his words of tribute. "We are saddened and stunned by their departure from our lives."

"They were an aircrew bound by the common bond of people who fly," he said. "Bound by the unspoken recognition of the risk involved. Bound by the exhilaration of flight."

"As a crew they had indeed, together, reached out and 'touched the face of God.'"

"I offer no easy answers or solutions to what happened," said Chaplain Lt. Col. L. Wilson Strickhausen. "I can only offer... the presence of God."

He urged everyone to experience life to its fullest and realize how precious the gift of life is.

"As long as we are in the business of defending this nation," said Vice Commander of the 21st Air Force John Sievertson, "accidents will occur... There will be sorrows and there will be tears."

"What do we do now," Brya asked. "We go on. We take a piece of their fierce pride, their unyielding loyalty, and their love of country — we make it a part of us."

"We will seek perfection and to honor those who have gone before us, to honor Gary, John, Tim and Glen. We remember."

Then the family, dignitaries and servicemen stepped outside to watch as three C-130s lumbered overhead, one flying off to the right, commemorating the dead men.

Quietly, the parking lot emptied. A fifth man who died, Army Staff Sgt. Douglas L. Hunter, will be honored at a memorial service next week.

Think About It

Church of Christ

By John Davis Marshall

Part V

Friends, the only way to overcome our prejudices is to consider what the truth can do for us and desire truth above everything else. We must begin by realizing the necessity of hearing the truth.

To the Colossians, Paul wrote of the hope which is laid up in heaven, "because of the hope laid up for you in heaven, of which you previously heard in the word of truth, the gospel." (Colossians 1:5)

Upon hearing the truth, and an investigation to determine its authenticity one must then believe, love and obey the truth of God. This is a very critical principle because Paul wrote of those who receive not the love of the truth that they might be saved.

He declared "...and with all the deception of wickedness for those who perish, because they did not receive the love of the truth so as to be saved. And for this reason God will send them a deluding influence so that they might believe what is false in order that they all may be judged who did not believe the truth, but took pleasure in wickedness." (II Thessalonians 2:10, 12).

When one hears the truth of God and recognizes it to be the truth, he will come to believe it, love it and obey it, if prejudice does not rule his heart.

Naaman was a good example of prejudice and obedience. He was a

New Game Habitats Work

Members of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission last week toured portions of thousands of acres of game lands that are expected to boost waterfowl and small game hunting in North Carolina.

For four hours, commissioners toured the 27,000-acre New Hope Game Land at Jordan Lake and the 19,000-acre Butler Game Land on Falls Lake. To see how employees with the Commission's Wildlife Management Division are managing the property.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers set aside the land for the commission to manage to make up for the loss of wildlife habitat caused by the construction of Falls and Jordan lakes.

Some of the land consists of open fields on which millet and other nursery crops are grown. The Commission provides nursery crops, such as lespedeza, cowpeas, Egyptian wheat and partridge peas, to landowners who want to provide better habitat for wildlife, particularly small game. Commissioners visited the Brickhouse Road Nursery and wildlife depot to see samples of the crops.

Other areas consist of scattered woods thick with undergrowth. Quail often find their favorite food in these areas.

The Penny Bend Rabbit Research area near Butler consists of 160 acres of fields where wildlife managers are using a variety of techniques to improve rabbit habitat. The facility provides an area for biologists to experiment with new techniques and monitor their effects on rabbit populations. Rabbits are trapped, tagged and released in order to collect this information. Hunting is not allowed in this research area.

Waterfowl subponds at Falls and Jordan lakes were a key interest on the tour. The lakes are being designed to improve habitat for migratory waterfowl. At the Jordan Lake project, commissioners visited the 400-acre Interstate 40 Waterfowl Subimpler. He desired to be cleansed of his leprosy. But his heart was set on his own ways. When Elisha, the prophet, heard of Naaman he sent word that if Naaman would come to him, he would know "that there is a prophet in Israel."

Naaman was told by the prophet, "Go and wash in Jordan 7 times, and his flesh would become clean." Naaman was insulted and his ego was greatly deflated. He said, "Behold, I thought..." The prejudice of his heart stood between him and God; between him and the cleansing of his diseased body. He declared "Are not Abner and Phaphar, rivers of Damascus better than all the waters of Israel? May I not wash in them and be clean?" The leper was so prejudiced that he "turned and went away in a rage!" His prejudice turned him away from God and assured his continued leprosy.

The servants of Naaman considered principle much greater importance, so much so that Naaman was influenced by them to replace prejudice with obedience. He dipped himself seven times in the Jordan, as commanded of God, and his flesh came clean. (2 Kings 5:1, 14).

What would you have done? Would you have followed principle and obeyed God, or would you have allowed prejudice to rule and remain unclear? Tune in next time for part VI, until then THINK ABOUT IT!

One On One

Why should Bork be confirmed?

Why do I think that the Senate should confirm Robert Bork as a Justice of the Supreme Court?

Maybe it is because I thought Robert Bork was such a good law school teacher.

Professor Bork's strong views and enthusiasm for hearing and debating the equally strong views of his students made his classroom a stellar place at the supposedly liberal Yale Law School.

His strong mind, his thoughtfulness, his sense of humor, his honesty, his toughmindedness, and his genuine respect for other people and their views gained for him extraordinary respect as a teacher. His insistence on independent analysis and criticism of prevailing legal theories made him a special teacher and showed him to be far from an ideologue of any variety.

Or maybe it is because I am a lawyer.

We lawyers tend to appreciate judges who are smart enough to understand the most complicated cases and will decide them fairly on the basis of the legal issues. Judges like that are treasures — whatever their politics.

Judge Bork is that kind of judge.

Maybe it is because I don't buy the argument that Bork's appointment will — by itself — overturn all the important Supreme Court decisions of the last 30 years.

I don't think that Bork is a radical right wing ideologue that some have made him out to be. But even if he were, there would still be at least six other justices who could not be so categorized — and they are not going to let the Court make a quick, radical change in any direction.

Maybe it is because I am just not as afraid of a dose of judicial restraint as some of my friends.

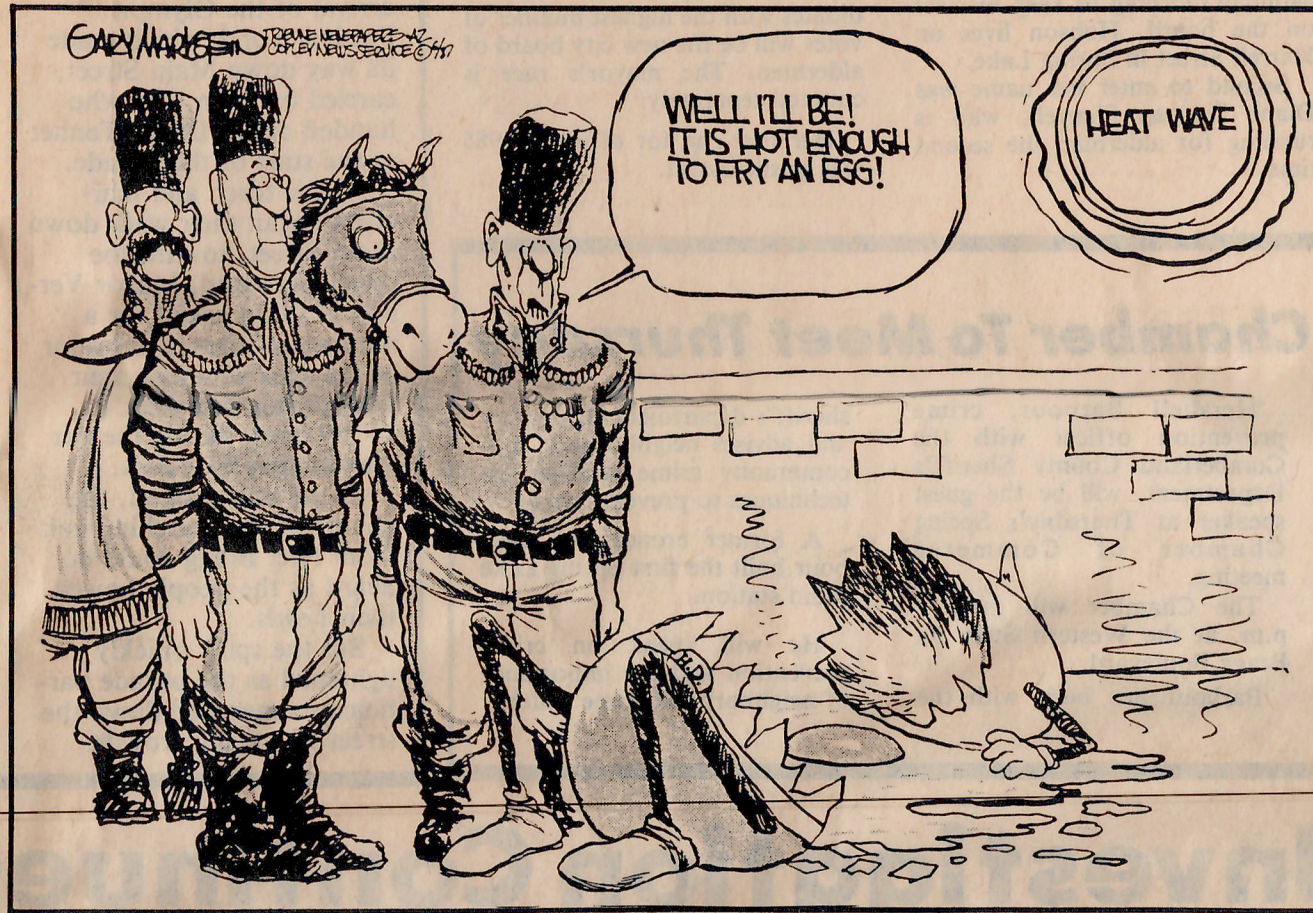

I admit that I like judicial activism when the judges are promoting my values and causes. But when judges adopt principles that I think are misguided, I want judicial restraint. President Reagan has already appointed more than half of all the Federal judges now serving in the lower courts. I don't want his judges actively using their positions to advance their political agenda. As an honest believer in judicial restraint, Judge Bork may help keep some of those lower court judges in check.

Maybe it is because I am afraid of who President Reagan may serve up as the next nominee if Judge Bork is not confirmed.

I am afraid of that. We are not likely to get a better selection from this President.

Maybe it is because of all of these considerations that I disagree with many of my friends who are fighting Judge Bork's confirmation. I hope he gets the job.

The Tragedy

Jennifer Milelli Mullen

Last Wednesday, I experienced a very sad and horrifying moment that turned a pleasant morning into a dreadful afternoon. I watched in stunned silence and sickening fear as the C-130 crash-landed and burst into flames on Fort Bragg.

That morning I had been excited about watching the Airborne Capabilities Exercise. I had heard how interesting and fun it was. I was joined by about 4,000 other onlookers, all dressed in shorts and comfortable clothes, who had settled in for a morning of fun.

We oohed and aahed as rows of paratroopers fell from the sky. Even the media bunch voiced admiration over the display.

Everyone clapped as the huge C-130s showed the ability to land and take-off in a short amount of space.

Then, everyone watched expectantly as another huge C-130 dropped from the sky to disgorge an armored Sheridan tank onto the field below. The media bunch were told it would make excellent pictures as the display was to occur just a few hundred feet from the stands.

Then we saw it, something was wrong. "Oh, no, something's wrong," someone around me said. But someone else said, "No he's got it." Then it happened.

Seconds later, the whale of an aircraft hit its belly on the dirt. It bounced, flying by us, the spectators jumped up from their seats in horror and uncertainty as the plane seemed to try and swerve toward the stands. Then in an eerie silence, which just lasted a second, the plane exploded into flames and smoke while the crowd watched.

The screaming, the crying, the swearing began. It was truly a horrible, tragic experience, for even the most cynical and jaded journalist.

But I must commend those in charge. They quickly quelled the crowd's panic. People were ushered from the site as the smoke and heat enveloped the area. Officers began organizing events in just a heartbeat.

While I was still reeling in shock, military men and women had already automatically begun to take action.

Within minutes, the crowd was filing into the buses while rescue, fire efforts had already begun.

So many civilians and military people wiped the tears from their eyes, weeping for the men who had lost their lives in such a terrible accident.

But I couldn't help thinking for a moment, Thank God that pilot had kept the sick aircraft from careening into the crowds. The disaster could have been much worse.

I also have to compliment the media's escorts for the day. Army Capt. Douglas Sensing and Air Force Capt. Brian Irving, who moments after the crash, Sensing ran to the site to get information for the media. Sensing and Irving acted professionally and calmly throughout the afternoon as they worked to get information and provide guidance to the media in the hot aftermath.

It was a public relations disaster. But they and their staff handled themselves as true professionals.

But my heart truly goes out to the families of the young men who had to die in such a manner — the wives, parents, brothers and sisters who unexpectedly lost an important and beloved member of their family. My prayers and concern are with all of you.

It was a day I will not soon forget.

Money, Marriage Don't Always Mix

Love and marriage may go together like a horse and carriage, but money and marriage do not. So, if you're thinking about marriage, you may do well to sit down and talk about your attitudes toward money.

How do you plan to spend your money? How do you feel about savings and investments? What are your long-range goals?

Once you see how different your attitudes are, you should try to develop a compatible plan - one where both sides will do some giving and taking. This is also a good time to discuss who will keep the family records. Someone has to assume the leadership.

Having some degree of financial independence is possible for most couples, but you'll have to work at it together. That means pinpointing your goals, mapping your strategies and building in checkpoints along the way.

Premarital agreements may sound unromantic, but they can be a good idea. A pre-marital agreement allows you to express your intentions for preserving or dividing your property before you tie the knot.

If you already have children, for instance, you can make sure they inherit most, or all, of your own property. Or, you can waive any rights to any share of your spouse's estate so that the estate can be bequeathed to his or her children. This is a crucial function of premarital agreements - one that explains why they're popular among people who have been married before. Generally, spouses are entitled to a specified percentage of their deceased spouse's estate.

If you decide to make a prenuptial agreement, each of you should have your own lawyer. You may want to make provisions for reviewing or revising the agreement.

Public's Help Needed With Goose Project

Waterfowl biologists with the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission are asking for the public's help in identifying and recording information on Canada geese spotted this summer across the state.

"We're asking people from the foothills to the coast to keep their eyes open for collared geese," said Dennis Luszczyk of Edenton, waterfowl project leader for the Commission. "The public could be a big help in determining the number of resident Canada geese as opposed to the migratory Canada geese."

In recent years, waterfowl biologists have banded Canada geese with neck collars to monitor movements and survival of geese in the Atlantic Flyway. The neck collar study is part of a project sponsored by the Atlantic Flyway Council to better manage populations in the flyway and to find ways to increase populations that winter in the South. The eight states participating in the projects are North and South Carolina, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia.

Luszczyk said persons who see geese through the end of August should record the following:

- the location, such as the county and town in which they are seen.
- the date the bird was seen.
- the color of the neck collar and the color of the lettering on it.
- the numbers and letters on the collars.

Civil War Reenactment

Interested in Civil War history? The Moore Independent Company H, of the 26th Regiment North Carolina Troops has been reactivated to entertain and educate residents about the Civil War.

The regiment will perform battle reenactments and living history events to commemorate the role of the North Carolina soldier during the war between the states.

The reenactment will be Sunday, July 12, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the Old Arsenal Grounds, Arsenal Avenue, in Fayetteville. Admission is free.

Apply By Phone For Benefits

People who wish to apply for Social Security retirement benefits but who find it difficult to visit the Fayetteville Social Security office can apply by telephone.

Social Security personnel will obtain the necessary information and then arrange to complete the application process by mail.

An application for retirement benefits should be made at least 2 or 3 months before the person plans to stop working. This will help assure that benefits will start for the month of retirement. The first check should be received early in the month following the first full month of retirement.

Certain documents are essential for establishing eligibility for retirement benefits. They include a Social Security card or a record of the number and proof of date of birth, such as a birth certificate or a religious record of birth or baptism that was recorded before the person was 5 years old. These documents must be original records or copies certified by the agency that issued them.

In the event that original records or certified copies are not available, the best possible evidence of date of birth should be submitted. These include, among others, schools and church records, a marriage license, a passport, and employment or military service papers.

Applicants for retirement benefits should also submit their Wage and Tax Statement form (W-2) for the preceding year, and self-employed individuals should submit a copy of their Schedule SE. The reason is that the most recent reports of earnings may not yet have been credited on the applicant's Social Security record.

A spouse who applies for benefits will have to provide similar documentation. In addition, a marriage certificate may be required. The birth certificates and Social Security numbers of eligible unmarried children should also be submitted.

Additional information about applying for Social Security retirement benefits can be obtained at the Fayetteville Social Security office. The telephone number is 486-2685.

Low-Income Phone Customers May Save Under New Program

Some low-income telephone customers may save money on their phone bills if they qualify for a new subscriber line charge waiver program now being offered throughout the state.

Under this program, which began July 1, telephone customers who qualify will not be required to pay the $2.60 monthly subscriber line charge, and they also will have their monthly rate for local service reduced by $2.60, bringing the total reductions to $5.20 a month.

The subscriber line charge is a monthly fee ordered by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) which all telephone customers pay for local telephone network facilities.

To qualify for the program, customers must be recipients of aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) or supplemental security income (SSI) benefits, and telephone service must be listed in their name.

Persons now registered with the State Department of Human Resources as a recipient of AFDC will receive an application for the telephone fee waiver and instructions for filing the application. Recipients of SSI should contact their local Social Security office for a verification form.

The subscriber line charge waiver program was established by the FCC to assist low-income telephone customers who may have difficulty paying more for local telephone service as a result of subscriber line charges.

Money to fund the rate reductions will come from interstate revenue sources and a tax credit on local telephone companies' state income tax returns.

The program was being offered on a one-year trial basis by Carolina Telephone, Southern Bell and Continental Telephone in three of North Carolina's counties.

How I spent my Summer...

by Tammy Sue Smith

I spent lots of time at the lake - I learned to roll my left foot.
Mommy let me sleep late - I was hung over.

We had cookouts every Saturday - The adults got bombed I tried crack

I met the neatest guy; he's a lifeguard I think I'm pregnant and goes to college next fall

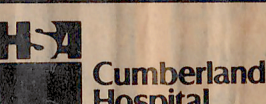

- Give a curfew. Kids expect limits although they protest the deadline.
- Watch for severe mood swings.
- A change in hobbies and companions—a major change in appetite... often these are indicators of a child in trouble.
