poll #424

(U) Didn't think the question quite fit me.

(U) I visited, but it was a long time ago. It was part of a class, but not the EOD class, the museum wasn't open way back in 88. I'd definitely be interested in another formal tour.

(U) I plan to take my parents to the Museum when they come up for my intern program graduation.

My cousins always ask me sneaky questions thinking they can get answers, when I brought them to the museum, they were like kids in a candy store. They were apprehensive at first, but not for long. I am very content playing with the Hobo codes, they got overstimulated I think... and they are in their early 40's. I felt like a preschool teacher trying to keep their attention and give them a little tour, fortunately Dr. Hatch had given such a good tour to me not to long ago :P I would not have survived otherwise.

My parents handled it a little bit better then my cousins

(U) It's funny you used a Perry icon on a comment that didn't have (and arguably didn't need) portion marking.

(U) I am a bad bad man. You, however, are very observant!

(U) LOL - you don't have "wasn't part of a formal tour but eavesdropped on several tour guides while touring on my own" on there! :-)) (I can make anything into an essay question. :-))

(U) Museum Tour on Agency Time

"(U) For those who have visited the NCM, on any visit have you had a formal tour?"

-- (U) No, and I can't see my supervisor turning anyone loose for a tour of the Museum on work time. :(

Re: (U) Museum Tour on Agency Time

(U) Well, if we have a seminar you'll just have to sign up. History classes should count towards your 160 hours of required training as an IA!

(U) Sorry to dig up a somewhat old post. Just wondering how big the NCM is?

(U) I'll be over in the US later in the year and was wondering if it would be worth the trip (I have no reason to be going to NSA HQ so I won't be 'in the area' as such) but if it's going to take more than 30 mins to run through, I might make the trip. :)

(U) I find that most 'quick' tours of the museum take about an hour; there are tour guides who routinely run longer tours and individuals who spend several hours wandering through the exhibits. It is a relatively small museum and how long your spend will depend on whether you have a tour or just want to dash through! You can check out a virtual tour on the outside www.nsa.gov web site. Highly recommend that you ask for a tour if you make the trip.
